

A tale is told of a doctor, in England, who not very conversant with cholera, was called in to prescribe for a cobbler who believed himself suffering from the epidemic. He told him to take the usual medicines, and called next day, when he was informed our cobbler was cured; indeed, so well was he, he had gone to work.

"Indeed," he replied, "that is well; you see my prescription has answered admirably."

"It wasn't your prescription that cured him," said the wife. "It was something else."

"Indeed, I! What was it then?"

"Impatient and hungry, he called for his supper—a salad of beans and potatoes, along with a red herring."

"Dear, dear!" exclaimed our doctor, and believing he had discovered a secret which nature by chance had revealed, he drew out his pocket-book and wrote the following as a cure for cholera:—

"Cholera—Prescription—Beans, cold potatoes, and red herring; to be taken immediately."

But a few days elapsed and our good doctor was called to attend a mason, also seized with cholera, to whom he at once gave the famous prescription. Alas! on the morning, on calling, he learned, to his astonishment, that a quarter of an hour after having eaten the salad, the poor man died.

"Dear, dear!" murmured the doctor; and again pulling out his pocket-book, he wrote the following memorandum, adding it to the prescription:—

"N. B.—An excellent remedy for cobbler, but useless for masons."

How Mr. LINCOLN SIGNED THE PROCLAMATION.—The Rochester Express relates the following as the circumstances attending Mr. Lincoln's signature to the Emancipation Proclamation, and says it has not before been published. The large roll containing that document was taken to Mr. Lincoln at noon on the first day of January, 1863, by Secretary Seward and his son Frederick. As it lay unrolled before him, Mr. Lincoln took a pen, dipped it in ink, moved his hand to the place for the signature, held it for a moment, and then removed his hand and dropped the pen. After a little hesitation he again took up the pen and went through the same movement as before. Mr. Lincoln then turned to Mr. Seward and said: "I have been shaking hands since nine o'clock this morning, and my right arm is almost paralyzed. If my name ever goes into history, it will be for this act, and my whole soul is in it. If my hand trembles when I sign the proclamation, all who examine the document hereafter will say, 'he hesitated.'" He then turned to the table, took up the pen again, and slowly, firmly, wrote that "Abraham Lincoln" with which the whole world is now familiar.—He looked up, smiled, and said: "That will do." That proclamation asserted that the "Executive Government of the United States, including the military and naval authorities thereof, will recognize and maintain the freedom of such persons."

"SCHOOL RULES."—The Ironton Register says that not many miles from that city a young lady is teaching school, and sends the editor the following rules, provided her by the trustee, for the government of her school:

"No swearing
"fitin
"quarrelin
"nicknamin
"go in into the water
"resin in jumpin
"go in into any persons vine-patches, or orchards, without the consent of the owner
"no pinchin
"stickin of pins into each other
"pullin of hair durin books
"cortin in school
"Not more than one pupil must go out at a time, unless for wood, coal or water
"No crackin of walnuts unless dried
"whisperin
"Those rules must be observed, for a violation of those rules will be punished with a lash, according to the verdict of the trustees."

Dogs.—Josh Billings favors the world with a brief essay on dogs:—Dogs in the lump are useful, but they are not always profitable. The Nufoundin dog is useful to save children from drowning, but you have got to have a pond of water and children running around carelessly, or else the dog ain't profitable. There ain't nothing made boarding a Nufoundin dog. Rat carriers are useful to catch rats; but the rats ain't profitable after you have ketchted them. The shepherd dog is useful to drive sheep; but if you have to go and buy a flock of sheep, and pay more than they are worth, just to keep the dog bizzy, the dog ain't profitable, not much. Lap dogs are very useful, but if you don't hold them in your lap all the time, they ain't profitable at all. The coach dog is one of the most useful of dogs I know of; but you have got to have a coach (and that ain't always pleasant) or you can't realize from the dog. Thus we see that, while dogs are generally useful, there are times when they ain't generally profitable.
