

A VARIATED VILLAIN.—Of Dr. Craven's career in the army we find the following singular episode: Every spare moment of Craven's time was employed in making collections of rare insects, fishes, herbs, and geographical specimens of other curiosities for his own or the Smithsonian Museum. Once, when a very scoundrelly deserter, convicted of going over to the enemy, and other crimes too abominable to be mentioned, was "shot to death with musketry," in pursuance with his sentence, Dr. Craven obtained the privilege of skinning him and tanning his hide—the skin itself tattooed all over while the fellow was a sailor, with pictures too blasphemous and obscene for contemplation, being a dreadful commentary on the multifarious crimes and offenses of which the soul therein dwelling had been greedily guilty. On his breast was our Savior suspended on the cross, tattooed in various colors, and on each side of it men and women—and even worse than this—in every conceivable attitude of public shame. It was also, I have heard—for I did not see the execution—all over the rest of his body; and certainly such a hide, with the eighteen holes in it, through which nine bullets entered and passed out, is no bad sermon on such a life as had been led by the villain.

BETRAYED HERSELF.—The Editor's Table of the Knickerbocker recently contained the following: A young gentleman, a member of our college, was expelled for the crime of drawing young ladies up to his room by means of a basket from his window.—Of course a great deal of gossiping conversation was the consequence. The following colloquy occurred between two ladies:

"Jane, do you believe that? students draw girls up to their rooms?"
"Certainly, my dear; more than that, I know they do."
"How?"
"Well, I was going to the college one morning—it was just before light—and I heard a noise in the direction of the college buildings. I looked that way, and as I see you now, I saw a girl in a basket about half way from a third story window to the ground, and just then the rope broke, and down I came!"

GOOD FOR BRIGHAM.—The Gentiles relate many stories at the expense of the leading patriarch of the church. There is a legend that one day a woman went to Brigham for counsel touching some alleged oppression by an officer of the church. Brigham, like a true politician, assumed to know her; but when it became necessary to record her case, hesitated and said:

"Let me see, sister—I forget your name."
"My name? was the indignant reply, 'why, I am your wife!'"
"When did I marry you?"
The woman informed the "President," who referred to an account book in his desk, and then said:

"Well, I believe you are right. I knew your face was familiar!"
MATHIMONY.—There is a magistrate in a town in Indiana named Helser. A clergyman in the same place was called upon by a young couple not long since, wishing him to join them in the holy bonds of matrimony. He asked the bridegroom, (a soldier by the way,) for his marriage license. The man in blue said he had been engaged to his girl for four years, and thought that would do.—Clergyman thought not, and remarked as the speediest way to obtain license, "you had better take your girl and go to Helser." "You can go to h—l yourself," retorted the veteran, and without further advice he left his presence.

O. K. K. B. W. P.—A friend relates the following: A young lady having purchased an assortment of music at a music store, on returning to her carriage recollected a piece she had neglected to buy, "Sir," said she, on re-entering the store, "there is one thing which I had forgotten, and which I must now request you to give to me." "And what is that?" asked the young music seller. "It is, sir, 'One Kind Kiss before We Part.'" She meant the song of that name. The gay youth, vaulting instantaneously over the counter, saluted the fair stranger. He lost his heart and his situation.
