

AN OBLIGING AGENT.—Some years ago, shortly after the introduction of the Illinois Central Railroad through that portion known as "Egypt," an honest countryman, who lived some forty years or thereabouts, in blissful ignorance of everything pertaining to the "leers," was appointed station agent at C—, one of the little out-of-the-way places where, as Dickens says, "no one could by any possibility want to get off or on." On receiving his instructions, he was told among other things, that as C— was merely a "flag station," trains would stop only when one wished to get off or on; and that if he wanted to stop any train, he must "flag" it.

Shortly after his appointment, accordingly, as the "mail" came thundering on, he placed the magic red flag in position, the signal to stop. As the car drew up to the platform, the conductor jumped off on the platform, with his accustomed, "All aboard," at the same time asking, "Any passengers to get on?"

"Wah, not as I know of," was the puzzled reply.

"Then what do you stop the train for?" shouted the irritated conductor.

"I didn't know but some one might want to get off," said the obliging agent in a conscious tone of injured innocence.

A GOOD DAY'S WORK.—Out in Michigan a number of farmers were sitting in front of a country store at the close of a sultry day, and telling stories about their work, and so on, when one of them took the rag off the whole of them by relating his experience.

"I say, you have all told whopping big yarns, now; but I'll just tell you what I done once in York State, on the Genesee flats, and on my father's farm. He owned a meadow just a mile long, and one morning in June I began to mow—sun about an hour high—and mowed right along the whole length of the field. The grass was so heavy that I had to mow down to the lower end of the field, and walk back, or as we say, 'carry my swath.' Well, I worked on until sundown, and then quit. I just thought, as the meadow was exactly a mile long, I'd count the swaths and I did so, and there was one hundred! That, gentlemen, is what York State folks call a big day's work."

"So you walked two hundred miles that day, did you?" asked one farmer.

"And mowed half the time you were walking?" said another.

"So it seems," replied the great mower.

"I tell you the fact, and you can make of it as you can."

TWO SIDES OF ONE TRANSACTION.—A few days since, writes a friend, as I was sitting with Brother D., in his office in Court Square, a client came in and said:

"Squire D. W., the stabler shaved me dreadfully yesterday, and I want to come up to him."

"State your case," says D.

"I asked him how much he would charge me for a horse and wagon to go to Deaham. He said one dollar and a half, but said he wanted another dollar and a half for coming back, and made me pay it."

D. gave him some legal advice, which was acted upon as follows:

He went to the stabler and said:

"How much will you charge me for a horse and wagon to go to Salem?"

Stabler replied, "Five dollars."

"Harness him up."

Client went to Salem, came back by railroad, went to the stable, and said:

"Here is your money," paying him five dollars.

"Where is my horse and wagon?" says W.

"He is at Salem," says client; "I only hired him to go to Salem."

COULDN'T BE BLUFFED.—Four persons had seated themselves in the mines to play a game of poker—the ante, as a substitute for money, being a handful of gold dust. They continued playing some time without either side winning much. At length one of the party, who had a good hand, went a handful "better."

"I see that, and go a pint better!" cried out another, who also had a strong hand.

"I see that," responded the first, "and go a quart better!"

"Well, I see that, and go a gallon better!" said the other.

This rather disconcerted his adversary for a moment as it "overized his pile." But, confident in the superior strength of his hand, he collected together all the gold dust he had left, and, putting it aside, coolly remarked to one of his companions, "Here, Jim, watch my pile until I go out and dig enough to call him!"
