THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE .- Out in Missouri lives a Mrs. Hampale, who has, or had, a daughter named Laura. Laura loved a man named Jack. This man Jack the mother didn't like, and she was informed by a neighbor that Jack and Laura bad arranged a plan for an elopement. Her mind was quickly made up. She announced to Laura next morning that she was going to Bellville on a visit, to be gone three days, and that she must be a grod girl and not tear the bouse down while she was gone.

. That night Jack knew of it, and as he read the nice little note that bade him "came, over early and stay until mother comes back, and what a splendid time we will have," he smiled, knocked the ashes from his eigar, and resolved of course be would go,

Jack went over. There is no earthly use in attempting to describe the delectable things he enjoyed; but it was sugar season on that plantation, sure. Just before dusk, while Jack was brimful of the glory of the occasion, in rushed Miss Laura's waiting-woman with-

"Lor bress my brack soul, chillen, ef yere ain't old missus right at the gatesure !"

"Ob, Dirah! What shall we do with Jack " exclaimed the terrified Laura. "Pop 'im in dat ar closet dar;" suggested Dinah; and Jack was bundled into the closet in a twinkling. A moment after in walked the old lady, and after scrutinizing Laura's blushing countenance, she felt sure Jack had been there, and said :

"Come here, Laura. Now, you can't deceive me-that abominable Jack Plain has been here, and you and he have fixed up a runaway match, to come off to-night. Oh, you little minx you! to treat me so after what I have done for you! But you'll find your mother no fool. You'll find she knows a thing or two, if she does say ti herself. Rather than you should marry that miserable Jack Plain, I'd see you laid in the grave. He's not going to squander my money, I assure you."

The old lady arose, and going to a clothes press, returned with several comforters and a pillow, which she threw into the closet where Jack was concealed, and then turning to the trembling Laura, she exclaimed, in a tone of thunder-

"March in there, miss; step right along! I'll see that you don't go nowhere near that low-flung mechanic this night!" Laura whimpered and protested that JOHNSTOWN STOVE & HOUSE-FURNISH-she didn't want to, declaring that her mother would be sorry for it some time; but without paying any attention to her protestations, the mother pushed her into the closet, shut the door, locked it, triumphantly put the key in her peeket, and in due time went to bed.

Pretty early in the morning, the old lady arose, fished the key from her pocket, and opened the closet door. She gazed wildly in for a moment, and then ut-G EORGE M. "Laura, Laura, dear, go into the kitchen and see about breakfast!"

Then presently— "Jack, Jack, come here!"

Jack came forth with a very son-in-law looking air. "Welt, madam, you called me."

"Jack, do you know snything about a

"At any rate, you know the Lord's prayer, Jack 9" "A little, marm."

"Well, I think that after breakfast you and Laura may as well go and get married, for I'm tired watching you, that's a fact, and besides-well, be a good boy."
