Fairness Again!

In another column we give the leading editorial of last week's Freeman, word for word and letter for letter, in order that our readers may see two things-the rage of a liliputian King Lear, and the unfair asked, and also remonstrances against the course and seemingly studied, though characteristic, misrepresentations of the Freeman. As a single specimen of the resorts to which our neighbor is put in order to maintain his position with a show of plausibility, we give the following instance, in which that paper succeeds to perfection in so garbling our language as to hide its meaning as completely as the advocate of any bad cause could desire : The Alleghanian said, "That the permanent disfranchisement of those unfortunate, deluded men who fled the country beer house, or restaurant, authorizing the or remained in hiding places to escape sale of domestic wines, malt or brewed the draft will be seriously proposed, we liquors, are to be made in the same maneannot say, though we hope not;" and the Freeman, as the reader may see, in its second attempt to (mis) quote our words, puts but four of them in quotation marks, divides our sentence into two parts by inserting a period in its middle, and leaves it so that no eye could distinguish our dollars, and elsewhere twenty dollars .words (save four) from its own.

the Freeman of what we ought, or ought | the flaming call for the temperance connot, to know, or do, or say. A "falsehood." if we correctly understand its meaning, is an untrue assertion, or a want of truth less than six different and distinct laws or veracity; and if the Freeman's representations of our language did not lack in truthfulness, then assuredly we do not comprehend the import of English words. | liquors in certain counties. We trust we are aware of the courtesies of editorial life, and if the Freeman can manage not to garble or misrepresent our positions, especially while almost in the very act of boasting of its fairness, it can have its fill of courtesies. Honesty goes before courtesy, and if at any time we so far forget honesty as to garble our neighmisrepresentations.

editor of the Freeman a very good and distinguished lawyer, but when the Freecourts, when it is only provided that the Legislature may not act in such cases of the fact that fully 1,043 acts were passed to the State at large, we begin to wonder if such recklessness of statement can keep company with profound legal lore.

We shall close this article by giving an additional example of the Freeman's fairness and truthfulness. In its last issue,

"There are in Cambria county about 40,000 whites and about 100 negroes. None of the former, during the last three months, have been guilty of a Penitentiary offence-two of the latter have. We need not comment on this."

Now, by the census of 1860, the whites in Cambria county numbered 29,040 persons, and the blacks 115 persons. But the Freeman, in order to make out as hard a case as possible against humble black people, assumes an increase of whites in seven years of about 34 one-hundreths and a decrease of the blacks of about 15 one-hundreths. It keeps also from its readers a fact well known to it-that several whites were saved from the Penitentiary by the sheer mercy of the court. We need not comment on this.

Sunday Travel.

The act lately before the Legislature to permit the running of horse cars on Sunday in Philadelphia, although supported by all the Senators and seventeen out of eighteen Representatives from that city, met with strenuous opposition from members from the rural districts, and was defeated. The inhabitants of the Quaker city count it an unjust discrimination that Pittsburg should have the privilege of running cars on Sunday, while they are denied it, and certainly their arguments are very plausible. In Philadelphia, as in every other city of the State, people of affluence have the privilege of traveling in buggy, barouche, or carriage, to or from church or elsewhere, on Sunday, as on any other day, and despite the judicial opinion of ex-Justice Lowry, we are unable to perceive why any such distinction should be made between citizens, either on the ground that the habits of the affluent cause their riding to come under the description of "works of necessity," or on any other pretext. Such distinctions smack too much of class privilege. If the horse car may not run on Sunday, then neither should the carriage. Such, we doubt not, is the view the people will take of it, and the law will ultimately be conformed to it.

Important to Hotel Keepers.

The Legislature has passed an act requiring that in the future, when any application is made to any court of quarter sessions for license to sell intoxicating drinks, it shall be lawful for the court to hear petitions in addition to that of the applicant in favor of granting the license application. The court may refuse a license when, in their opinion, (having due regard to the number and character of the petitions for and against the petition,) such license is not necessary for the accommodation of the public. Upon sufficient cause shown, the court may revoke any license previously granted, though it seems to be left entirely to the courts to determine what constitutes sufficient cause for the revocation of a license. Even under this bill, the Pennsylvania Rail Road Company may become more powerful than Pennsylvania herself.

Women's Rights.

"There is nothing new under the sun," said Solomon. Yet it is pretty generally conceded that the equality of all men before the law, and the appeal by many women of the present day for full political rights, are two new things totally unknown to the ages that have gone before us. But not so. The idea is very | The "unconditional release" of a man chargold. According to a Grecian comedy, it happened, once upon a time, in the De- complicity in the most heinous murder of the mocracy of Greece, that the wife of a magistrate desired that the country should conclude a peace with Sparta, and determined to carry out her design. So, complaining that the wives of Athens had received only imperious looks and commands to attend their own business, in answer to their inquiries as to the progress of the war, she declared that the women were more fit than men to rule the State and preserve Greece from threatened ruin.

Carolina lately invited "all the States, North, South, East, and West," to meet in national convention, to propose amendments to the Constitution of the United States. Governor Geary, in laying these resolutions before our State Legislature, reminds the North Carolinoans that it is not the place of whipped traitors "to ask the loyal men of this country to meet them upon equal terms in convention to amend the Constitution they repudiated and attempted to destroy." The Governor's remarks are given in full on the outside of this paper.

[From the Ebensburg Freeman, March 21.] How Foolish!

The Alleghanian, a week or two since, had an article in favor of a convention to amend the Constitution of Pennsylvania, and stated, in extenso, the amendments it desired-four in number. It had a perfect right to do this. We replied, stating our dissent from its propositions, and thought we had a right to do so.

FAIRNESS.

In order to consider the propositions. we gave a brief synopsis of the positions taken by our neighbor in order to reply to them. That we stated them fairly, the best evidence is that, with but very little variance, it reiterates them in the paper of last week. We have no space to reproduce them, but refer our readers to The Alleghanian for the truth of what we say. "ALMOST."

1st. We repeat, then, that power is given to the Courts by law in almost every case where special legislation could be required : and the Constitution, by its own showing, does prohibit special legislation in all such cases. Because we say this, The Atleghanian thinks us no lawyer.

"WAIT TILL YOU COME TO FORTY YEAR." Now, our young friend ought to know that this is useless, and worse than useless. It matters not what the past history of the editor of the Freeman has been; nor where he has lived, nor what opinions he has heretofore held. Notwithstanding the present acknowledged purity of the editor of The Alleghanian, when he shall have doubled the period of his present existence, he may have as many errors to atone for us the editor of the Freeman.

WE COULDN'T IF WE WOULD, AND WOULD-

We have no past history of the editor of The Alleghanian to regale our readers with, nor should we assail it if we could. His past history is unknown to fame, as his future history promises to be-and it is little difference to the readers of The Alleghaman, and still less to those of the Freeman, what his antecedents are.

NO LAWYER, NO JUDGE-A LAWYER AND THE SON OF A LAWYER.

The editor of The Alleghanian thinks we are no lawyer. We think he is no judge. Surely the Freeman does not boast of the legal ability of its editor, nor does the columns of a newspaper require it. But we may say that it was once thought we had sufficient ability to introduce the father of the editor of that paper within the portals of the profession.

HOLD! ENOUGH!

But enough !- too much of this! We like good-natured, amiable discussion. It is the life of the people. We like to take a fall with any of our editorial brethren in a good humored way, but when it grows into vindictive personality, it is unpleasant to ourself, and worse than useless to our readers. We hope hereafter our friend of The Alleghanian will keep himself within the bounds of editorial courtesy and propriety, and then we shall get along pleasantly.
