The Democratic Party.

The ecstasy of the Democratic party, over its recent victory in Connecticut, seems to be unbounded. The cackling of a hundred hens after their first achievement in laying eggs, varied by the crowing of rejoicing chanticleers, is nothing compared to it. Visions of a Democratic President, a Democratic Congress, Demoeratic Governors of the Northern States, and Legislatures of the same faith, rise before them and make each member of the "unterrified" feel as sure of a foreign mission or a post office as though he had his commission for it in his pocket. But human hopes are often vain. 'Tis a pity for Connecticut. How without stint she has been abused, called all sorts of harsh names, rated with Massachusetts for fanaticism, and threatened with the formation of a new Union of which she and her sister New Eugland States would compose no part, simply because she has hitherto been for the war and the principles that gave it character and made it a success, we all remember, for the echoes of much of this abuse have scarcely died away. But having thrown herself into the arms of her former foes, her past sins are forgotten, and she becomes almost as promising a heritage to Democracy as South Carolina. A thousand majority or less out of ninety thousand votes has caused all this uproar in the Democratic camp. A changing of about 750 votes out of 90,000 far more than comprises the result of all the labors of Democracy, aided by Johnson, Seward, Dixon, Doolittle, the post-offices, the marshalships, the custom-houses, the collectorships and assessorships. Other influences than political have also aided in temporarily giving a triumph to the old opponents of the war, assisted by a few scramblers for position and a limited number of others who are dazzled with Andy-Johnsonism. But the question we wish to discuss is: Does the result of the Connecticut election foreshadow good to the Democratic party? The Democratic party, in the days of its power, was the apologist, patronizer, and abettor of slavery, granting it demand upon demand under the specious plea of compromise and in the righteous name of peace, until that institution forced a direct issue with the people of the North for domination in the affairs of the nation. Under Democratic rule, the adherents of slavery inaugurated open and undisguised war against the nation, and the Democratic party declared that although the South had no right to make war upon the nation, yet the nation had no authority to resist. Throughout the war, more especially after the emancipation proclamation, she was ite steadfast opponent. In fine, the Democratic party was the constant patron of elavery before the war, the apologist of secession and the rebellion through the war, and the steadfast opponent of anything like abolition of slavery as a war or civic measure. In these three things, the people of the North have time and again decided in favor of the Republican party, and put their opponents into almost hopeless minorities. It may therefore be most safely assumed, that no party can ever triumph is the North that directly or by implication condemns the war against the rebellion or any of the leading measures of the war. But a party of progress and of freedom, acting in opposition to the Republican party, exposing its mistakes, and disputing with it for popularity among the people, would probably achieve success. In the Democratic ranks are men who wish to make theirs such a party -a party of equality and justice. The Chicago Times and Boston Post have emphatically appounced that the only hope of their success is in making such a change. But our defeat in Connecticut was owing greatly to our own timidity and the persistent cry of "nigger!" by the Democrats. So, throughout the whole North, the staple of Democracy is this ery against the "nigger," and of "nigger equality." But just here is the dilemma. The Democratic leaders in the South are as busily engaged in courting Sambo as their Northern coadjutors are in upbraiding him. In Connecticut, the State is three hundred and seventy-two miles, and lost to us through the charge of "nigger Carolina, a triumph of Democracy would be owing to Democratic requests for "colored men" to step into their conventions and take part in their proceedings. "Try us before you look to the North for friends," says Wage Hampton to South Carolina blacks; "come into our convention," say the Democrats of Tennessee ; "d-n the nagur !" shouts the Northerner. who fears he will be outstripped by she black. So goes the game. We can safely you lose.".

The Liquor Laws.

Our most worthy Legislature, anxious to do the will of all, the Pennsylvania

ward, have given the people of each of the various sections of the State just such a law in regard to the sale of liquors as seems to suit the majority of the voters. For the information of the traveling public, as well as for the staid people who stay at home, we will name the different laws now in force relative to the sale of liquors, or so many of them as have come to our cognizance. First of all is Philadelphia, where whisky is free and lager freer, and whoever chooses may sell anything drinkable from pop to mint-julep upon paying the required tax. But a peculiar hardship for Philadelphia drinkers is, that unless they luckily get possession of a barouche or buggy or other vehicle, they have no access to the gardens, so called, for drinking, on the outskirts of the city proper. Freeport, Armstrong county, is blessed with a prohibitory law, that applies generally to the country lying within two miles of the town, but makes some obvious distinctions-Armstrong. Westmoreland and Butler counties join at or near Freeport, and the law extends three miles into Butler, but not at all into Westmoreland. If we were a citizen of Butler, we would protest. In Ohio township, Beaver county, if a man is bound to drink, he must go over the township line. But anywhere else in the county a man has the privilege of kicking the town-pump and bowing to the tumbler. In Leechburg and Apollo boroughs, in Armstrong county, Saltsburg, Indiana county, Duncannon borough and Penn township, Perry county, or within two miles of any of these places, the only whistle wetter is the town-pump or the buttermilk crock. In Westmoreland, Blair, and Indiana counties, saving such exceptions as we have named, the rule of the law is that sale of all manner of liquors, malt, brewed, spiritous, or vinous, shall be confined to the keepers of inns, hotels, or taverns. Potter county has a prohibitory law big enough to embrace the whole by the nose. county. Derry township, Westmorelaud county, Blairsville borough, Burrell township, and East Mahoning township, Indiana county, have each a prohibitory law. Allegheny county has a law somewhat after the fashion of that in force in Philadelphia. Then there is the law which district. we published last week, and which affects such parts of the State as have not special temperance enactments of their own. It would puzzle a philosopher to divine what the Legislature means by enacting so many local laws to regulate the sale of liquors-whether it is a piece of demagogueism, or an experiment to test the virtue of each. One thing, and only one. seems to be clear to the Legislature, and that is, that a drink is worth a two miles

Since the first of January, the large majority of American mills have been idle. At the present time, many employees are demanding increased wages and others are refusing to suffer a reduction of the same, preferring, rather, to join in "strikes" and walk the streets in idleness. Need any other cause for such a state of affairs be sought than is plainly shown by the foregoing figures, which express the gold value of our imports ?-At least two-thirds of these imports could be manufactured in American mills and workshops. Perhaps it is the laudable ambition of Secretary Seward to secure this new territory in order that the American flag, spread-eagle, stars and all, may be planted on the top of Mt. St. Elias as a prelude to the first pailing of say to Democracy, "Heads we win; tails the same emblem to the extremity of the and may at the discretion of the Court be North Pole.

THE STATE LOAN. -It is gratifying to note the alacrity and unanimity with which our capitalists have responded to the appeal of the State of Pennsylvania for means to fund her past due indebtedness, and thus, by setting herself financially right, be enabled to discharge the claims of her creditors. By an act passed at the present session of the Legislature, the Governor was empowered to advertise for proposals for a loan of twenty-three million dollars, at par, for the funding of the past due bonds of the Commonwealth. On the 1st, the bids were opened, when it was found that more had been offered than was required. Thirty-one million dollars were proffered, at six per cent. interest, ranging from par to one-half per cent. premium. One million dollars was bid for at par, for five per cent, interest. Messrs. Drexel & Co., E. W. Clarke & Co., and Jay Cooke & Co., well known bank ing firms of Philadelphia, obtained a majority of the bids, all at a premium, and the remainder, about seven millions, has been taken in other parts of the State .-This exhibit shows that our State has regained all ber financial reputation, and SERIOUS RAILROAD ACCIDENT .- The Cincinnati Express east on the Pennsyl vania Railroad was thrown off the track at Wall station, on Sunday afternoon last. Nearly the entire train was dashed to pleces. A brakeman received such severe injuries that he died soon after, and several other employees of the train were more or less injured. None of the passengers were hurt. The accident was a premeditated piece of diabolism, and was caused by placing obstructions on the track. Three men are now in custody in Pittsburg charged with having committed the outrage. If proven guilty, swift retribution should be meted out to them.
