purchase of that article. "You just never mind me," said the other boy. "I'll thank you to attend to your own business, Mister Bob. I don't care what dad allows; I'll buy what I please."

"I'm going to tell dad," said Bob, and he rushed home and into the room where the old man was quietly reading the morning paper.

"Dad, dad," yelled the boy, "Bill's went and got shot !"

"Good heavens!" exclaimed the old man, dropping the paper and bolting for the door; "where is he?"

"Down to Smith's store," responded Bob.

In his excitement, the old man forgot to remove his reading glasses, and in going down the steps he misjudged the distance to the pavement, stepped off too soon, and landed on all fours.

He pathered himself up and started for | Porch Irons, the store. The pavement appeared to him to be about level with his knees, and consequently in his violent efforts to keep it under him, he cut a very ludicrous figure, and drew from the astonished bystanders roars of laughter.

He at length arrived at the store, where Bill was stretched out on the coal box, taking it casy. The old man, supposing him badly hurt, rushed frantically up to him, exclaiming,

"O, William! William! where are you wounded ?" "What's the matter, dad? Are you crazy ?" asked Bill, raising on his elbow, and casting a look of astonishment at the old man. "Why, Robert said you'd got shot!" "So I did-got half a pound of the best shot in the store." The old man left, amid noise enough to drown a thunder elsp. As might be supposed, Bob got the flogging and Bill

How THEY Do Ir .- A wealthy man of Boston, who owns a country residence in the suburbs of that city, recently became dissatisfied with it and determined to have another, and instructed an auctioneer, famous for his descriptive powers, to advertise it in the papers at private sale, but to conceal its location, telling purchasers to apply at his office. In a few days, the gentleman happened upon the advertisement, but failed to recognize | Chandlers, it as referring to his own property. He Edge Tools, was greatly pleased with the account of Punches, Hammers, Pad Trees, the place, showed it to his wife, and the two concluded it was just what they wanted and they would secure it at once. So he Rein Web, went to the office of the auctioneer, and told him that the place he had advertised was such an one as be desired and he would purchase it. The auctioneer burst into a laugh, and told him that it was a description of his own house that he had been reading. The merchant pondered for a time on the "grassy slopes," "beautiful vista," "smooth lawn," etc., of the advertisement, and then exclaimed-"Is it possible! Make out my bill for advertising and expenses, Mr. Auctioneer, for, by George, I wouldn't sell the place now for three times its cost !"

A HINT TO CANDIDATES .- A candidate for office, canvassing his district, came upon a man who had a vote to cast. The man was milking a cow.

"Shall I hold her?" asked the office seeker, noticing the animal was somewhat fractious.

The voter consented, and the office seeker took the cow by the horns. The voter kept on with his milking.

"Have you had Brown around here lately?" presently asked the candidate, referring to his rival. "Oh, yes," replied the voter; "he is behind the barn now, holding the calf !" TIN AND SHEET IRON WARE
