

The Farmer's Department.

PAINTING.—Every farmer may be his own painter. Many inexperienced persons, and indeed professional painters think that paint mixed in the same way as for outside work, will answer for the inside of a house; but experience demonstrates in the most conclusive manner, to the reasonable and observing mind, that, necessarily, such cannot be the fact. Simple whitelead and linseed oil, mixed in the same manner as for outside work, will, it is true, harden, and act as a powerful and highly economical preservative of wood to which it is applied; but in a few weeks the paint will become discolored and of a dusky yellow hue in consequence of the absorption of carbon which is supplied by the smoke from the chimney, lamps, and other sources. Why the same result is not remarkable on the outside is not exposed to the same influences; but, on the contrary, is constantly bleached by the impinging rays of the sun, which operate precisely as they do upon cotton and linen fabrics when similarly exposed. When a coating is required for inside work, very little oil should be used, except that contained in the lead. Spirits of turpentine should be the principal fluid introduced to thin paint, Japan, in small quantities, being added to accelerate the drying process. The priming, or first coat, however, should in all cases be mixed with oil alone, and when hard, smoothed by rubbing down with sand paper. After this, two coats should be put on with turpentine alone, no oil being used, the final one being somewhat of the thickest. If a good gloss is desirable, a small quantity of varnish may be added. To secure a nice white finish for a suit of rooms, after putting on the paint very carefully, gum demar varnish should be applied. This makes a most splendid and durable gloss, and preserves unsullied the pure white of the most delicate paint. Should the paint become sullied, the stains may be easily removed from the surface, simply by washing it with warm water; no soap should be introduced into the fluid, as its action destroys the gloss of the coating, and is injurious to the paint. This varnish, introduced into the last coat, gives a most superb finish; but most painters prefer applying it after the work is finished and partially dry. In painting kitchens and other apartments in common use, the best article is pure whitelead, although some persons prefer to add a little lamp-black or chrome yellow; but owing to the perpetual presence of carbonaceous substances it soon becomes sullied, and presents a dirty and unpleasant appearance. Graining in imitation of maple, birch or some other light wood, is probably the best coating that can be given to the wood-work of a kitchen. When well done, this kind of painting has a remarkably neat and even elegant appearance; it is easily cleaned, and when partially defaced by age, may be renovated and restored almost to its original brilliancy by a coat of varnish. The art of painting is one that may be acquired by any person of ordinary ingenuity.—Germantown Telegraph.

RULES FOR COW MANAGEMENT.—Cows should run dry six weeks before calving; if milked closely toward calving, the calves will be poorer. A cow newly come in should not drink cold water in cold weather, but moderately warm slop. Calves, intended for raising, should be taken from the cow within a few days, and they will be less liable to suck when they are old. Feed them first on new milk for awhile, then skim milk, taking care that all the changes are gradual, by adding only a portion at a time. Hearty eaters are desirable for cows, and may usually be selected while calves. A dainty calf will be a dainty cow. Heifers dried up too early after calving, will always run dry about the same time in milk closely the first year, until about six weeks before calving. Spring cubs should come in while they are yet on hay, and before they are turned to grass, which will be more likely to prevent oak bad and milk fever.—Exchange.

WORK FOR A WET DAY.—A practical farmer jots down the following as appropriate: Barnyard to shovel up and manure to haul to next fall's wheat ground. Barn doors, yard gates, etc., to mend. Drains and waste-water outlets to be attended to. Mowing machines to be put in order; also, horse-rake and hay tender. Grease wagons, mend harness and bags, wash carriages. Cut and haul wood and clean out celler, whitewash, etc. Hen-house to clean out, and compost for corn to make.

TOMATOES FOR WINTER USE.—After skinning perfectly ripe tomatoes, cut out any green around the base. I think leaving in this hard green core is the immediate cause of the loss of the fruit.—Place them in a bell metal kettle over the fire; season with salt as if for immediate use; then only allow them to come to a boil; while hot put in stone canner small mouthed gallon jars, cork and seal. If proper judgment be exercised you will never lose one jar.

ORCHARDS.—To promote healthy and vigorous growth in orchards, so as to furnish the best fruit, never sow any kind of grain or plant corn in them, because it is ruinous to the trees. Plant potatoes or some other root crops among your trees, and you will be agreeably surprised at the growth compared with those among which grain crops are sown.

EARLY TO BED and early to rise make a man healthy, wealthy, and wise.
