

How the President is Elected.

The electors chosen by the people of the several States are required, by the Act of 1792, to assemble at the capitals of their respective States on the first Wednesday in December, being the 2nd day of that month this year, and there to vote by ballot for President and Vice President, making lists of the ballots cast for each. These are to be transmitted, before the first Wednesday in January, to the President of the Senate at Washington. On the second Wednesday in February, that officer will open all these certificates, in the presence of the two Houses of Congress, and the votes are then counted, usually by tellers designated by each House. The persons having, respectively, the greatest number of votes, for President and Vice President, provided such numbers be majorities of the whole number of electors appointed, "shall be" says the Constitution, "President and Vice President." There are other provisions in that instrument, applicable to a case when no person is found to have a majority of the whole number of electoral votes, but we need not quote them here, the votes to be given for Grant and Colfax being largely in excess of the majority constitutionally required.

The twenty-six electoral votes of Pennsylvania, being one for each representative of the State in the two Houses of Congress, will therefore be cast at Harrisburg on the 2nd of December next, by the twenty-six Electors, who, on Tuesday 3d, received so decisive a majority of the suffrages of the people of the Commonwealth. Selected by the friends of Grant and Colfax for that purpose, and the claim ratified by the votes of the people, these Electors meet only for the discharge of their appointed duty, after which the College is dissolved. No legal obligation binds these gentlemen to cast their ballots for the Republican nominees, but usage, public expectation and personal honor supply, in this regard, all the needful guarantees that the electoral voice of the Commonwealth shall be heard in faithful accordance with the wishes of the majority of the people. Only the death, or the declination, of either of the present candidates could entitle the Electors to exercise any discretion whatever in the support of others not named in the canvass.

No such case as this has yet been known to our history. The Electoral vote of each State has invariably been cast in accordance with the well understood wishes of the popular majorities by which the Electors were chosen.

Gen. Grant Makes a Speech.

On Tuesday afternoon of last week a committee, consisting of delegates from the Sailors and Soldiers' Republican Committee, officers of "Boys in Blue," the President of the Central Grant Club, and the Mayor of Washington, together with the Algermen and other prominent citizens, called upon Gen. Grant by appointment. The object of this visit is set forth in the Mayor's address, as follows:

"GEN. GRANT: In behalf of the citizens and the Republican organizations of this city, we have called to tender our hearty congratulations on the result of the recent election, and to make known to you their wishes, that they may be permitted to attest their feeling of happiness and joy by a proper public demonstration, welcoming you as the President-elect to the capital of the nation, as they were deprived of that pleasure on your arrival here by a sort of flank movement by which you stole a march upon our people. All indulge the hope that you will now accede to their request, and name the time and place that will be most agreeable to you for such demonstration."

Gen. Grant responded as follows: "I am glad to meet you all and receive your congratulations, but I hope you will spare me any public demonstration. I live in this city and like to avoid demonstrations here as elsewhere, and with my consent there cannot be any. I am always ready to meet such gentlemen as may call upon me at my office or house, any time, without public display or demonstration. This would be much more agreeable to me, and I hope it will be agreeable to you."

The Mayor replied: "We shall certainly study your pleasure in the matter." Gen. Grant then said: "I am not mindful of the feeling intended to be displayed by a public demonstration, and you must take all this for granted." [Laughter.]
