A new watering place has been opened for the season at State College. For the benefit of the public we would say that none but preparatory students are admitted.

Danforth's unexpected drop into the frog pond, seems to have had a dampening effect on the inhabitants of that watery district, as they have not croaked, "y-a-u-r-d-d-r-u-n-k" since,

"Baldy," (who prides himself on his irresistability, to Bellefonte girl).—"This is a beautiful day, Miss X."

Miss X. (very coldly turning away).—
"Rather cool, don't you think, Mr. W?"

At the base ball game, (1st girl).—"Oh! I just dote on base ball! I could sit and watch Mr. Brew catch flies all day."

and girl, (who has only caught the latter part of the remark).—"The idea! Do you take Mr. Brew for a fly-trap?"

Commandant to Baldy: "Mr. Quartermaster, where is that sponge-staff?"

Baldy .-- "I don't know."

Commandant,—"Go and hunt it."

Baldy—"Where is there a sophomore?"

Licutenant S. S. Pague has been elected by the Athletic Association as a delegate to inspect the gymnasiums of Cornell, Yale and Harvard; also, to consult with Dr. Sargent as to the best apparatus for equipping our new gymnasium.

For the past month the engineering members of the Junior Class have been taking turns at running the electric motor during the evening. "John Andy" says when he has somebody to start and stop the engine and to keep up the steam for him he can get along first-rate.

It has become customary for the mechanical engineering students to take turn about in running the electric light plant. This plan has proved itself a successful one, and is appreciated by the students of that course, as it gives them a practical knowledge of the running and working of machinery.

The following are the speakers and their subjects for the Junior Oratorical Contest, which will take place in the chapel, June 25th, at 8 o'clock P. M.:

A great improvement has been made on the path leading from the College entrance to the avenue by having put down a patent pavement. Mr. Cunningham, of Bellefonte, who has the right to lay this kind of pavement, put it down as an experiment. The experiment has worked so well and with such satisfaction that we hope the time is not far distant when all the main paths will be so constructed.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church held its meeting at the home of Superintendent Patterson, and was quite successful in its efforts towards the good cause. We do not know what amount was raised, but, judging from the large attendance of the students, there should have been a very satisfactory footing. The refreshments were abundant and well served, and the general enjoyment of the evening was such as to make all wish for a repetition of such pleasant meetings.

The heoric actions of Mr. C. W. Heppenstall in saving lives of women and children during the late flood at Johnstown, have been commented on very much by the daily papers. "Billy," as he is known here, was on his way back to College, after a short illness at his home in Pittsburgh, and when the day express on which he was traveling was overtaken by the flood, he at once set about to do what he could to save the lives of those in danger. We are glad to record this action as it shows a man under his true colors.
