

made the most pleasant of the three. What has become of the Junior Hop? we were under the impression we were to have a hop once every term. Before dancing was allowed at the college every one was saying what we would do if we were only allowed the privilege of dancing; now that we have received the right to hold dances, why not take advantage of it.

For a year past, on account of the bad weather, the public road leading from the hotel up to the railroad, has been in a horrid condition; especially through the town, in several places the water has been standing for months at a time. The inhabitants have petitioned the township several different times to try and remedy the condition of affairs, but a deaf ear has been turned to all their appeals. Many of the business men of the town have become indignant about the matter and will, with the help of the college, take it upon themselves and pike at least the worst part of the road.

The latter part of the Winter term the Sophomore class, in connection with their work in chemistry, took a trip to Bellefonte, to investigate the workings of the furnaces of that place. We arrived just in time to see the "cast." The rest of the morning was spent in investigating the different departments of the furnace and in examining the varied kinds of ore used. We are deeply indebted to Mr. Young, the chemist, for his kindness and the interest he took in explaining everything. The afternoon, up to 3 o'clock, was spent at the glass furnace. We returned home on the afternoon train, highly pleased and benefitted by our trip.

The Jew says, "I know what it is to be in love," I walked four miles once to see a girl. All the way there I was studying which would be the best way to greet her; I struck a plan; the instant she opened the door I would rush in, throw my arms around her and there and then tell her how fondly I loved her and beseechingly implore her to reciprocate my love. It was a capital plan, I would try it. I drew near the house, my heart failed me, and I was compelled to call a halt for breath; I cursed myself for being so chicken-hearted, mustered up courage afresh, stepped up to the door and rang the bell: the door opened suddenly, an instant more and — flash! quick as lightning the dog sprang out at me; I turned and fled in the direction of my home, making about forty miles an hour, but the dog gained continually, I exerted every muscle and fairly flew — the brute gained at every step. The crisis came — I lost, ah! bitterly I wept; I lost part of my Sunday breeches.

The next day the young lady received a package and a note which read as follows: Dear Miss

By this mail I advance to you the remnant of my pants,
There's just the waistband and one leg,
Which you'll accept with love I beg;
It may be, when you find the rest,
They'll make your brother John a vest.
The shreads I send are very slight,
Your Pa's dog got the rest last night.
