On Saturday afternoon, April 5th, the new gymnasium was informally opened. The announcement of the fact was hailed with enthusiasm by every one as we have been waiting long for the event. During the afternoon throngs of students were to be seen wending their way to the armory and all were pleased with the fine apparatus. Now that we have a "gym" we hope to make a better showing in athletics than previously. Hitherto we have been greatly handicapped in training and our teams have been at a great disadvantage. But now that time has passed and we anticipate a much better record for P. S. C. in the future.

One of the most desperate and dastardly schemes ever known in the history of crime was consummated on the night of the 18th of April. Under cover of the intense darkness a band of villains, who have been operating recently in the vicinity, contrived by forcible means to enter the provision department of the ladies' cottage. In this treasure vault there was resting in supposed security one of the triumphs of the art of the professoress of D. E. It was a cake. The villains immediately determined to purloin this luscious looking hunk of sweetness. But alas! when two of the thieves attempted to pass the feathery crumb out of the window to an accomplice; the latter gent (?) was unable to carry it and so it dropped to the ground with a dull thud. Oh, how heavy it was, and yet it was not large. There was but one way of removing it, and so a mule and a cart and a large axe were procured, the dainty morsel was hacked into pieces of convenient weight, and these were carted away one by one to the rendezvous. The effect of the terrible night's work was very telling on the robbers, both outwardly and inwardly, and nothing was seen of them for several days. To the lady inmates the burglary was certainly fortunate, for by it a narrow escape was made from an awful torture, prepared by the "aussorities" of the house.

Prof. in Physiology—"Miss S—, what are the carbohydrates?"

Miss S—"Starch, grape sugar, milk sugar." Sleepy intercepting, "Milk shake."

Lieutenant, in tactics—"Gentlemen, I wish to criticise the way you sit in the class-room. At West Point a cadet would be compelled to work for an entire Saturday, if he lounged in class the way you do."

Count Gibbs—"Lieutenant, may be they have better seats than these."

Wallenstein—"Lieutenant, may be they wear cavalry pants."
