

military duties. When the cadet realizes that there is more than mere theory in them, he at once becomes interested and attentive. At camp he is impressed with the responsibility under which he acts and always brings that impression back with him to college. The private sees that he is of more importance in the corps than he had thought, and develops a spirit of subordination, which tends very much toward the making up of a first class battalion. The loss to the student in his other studies is small when compared with the vast amount of benefits derived from a week at camp. The experience of former years ought to be satisfactory enough to warrant the Faculty in making it a permanent thing.

DURING this college year, or rather during the time since it has become too cold to insure comfort without artificial heat, it has been a common occurrence for the students and other persons attending chapel, to find that room very uncomfortably cold. The only apparent reason for this disagreeable condition is the neglect of the authorities in seeing that the janitors perform their duties properly. It is no longer regarded by the students as an accident, but rather as a lack of attention. It is known that there is an ample supply of men employed by the institution for this purpose, but to find them upon occasions of this kind would require the services of a body of first class detectives. The dangers to which we are exposed need not be mentioned. If more attention were given to the comfort of those who have to go there and remain during the services, the students would not fail to appreciate it. The same thing has occurred on week days, and we hope that the matter will be looked after more closely than in the past.

WE recently had the opportunity of listening to the Rev. Dr. G. W. Chamberlain, who delivered several instructive talks on Brazil, in the chapel. Dr. Chamberlain has been engaged in missionary work at San Paulo, Brazil during the last thirty years nearly, and is thoroughly conversant with all the problems which have arisen in that country during that time. He made very clear to us the political aspect for the future, as well as that all important question, the relations between Church and State there.

Dr. Chamberlain is also interested in the founding of an industrial college in Brazil, in which interest he is now laboring in this country. He has bright hopes for the political future of the Republic, and gave us a better idea of the men who are now at the head of affairs there, than we usually get from newspapers. Our privileges for listening to a better informed man on Brazil, its past and present history, indeed have been rare.
