

principalship of the public schools of Seattle to accept the presidency of the Washington State College at Pullman. To show the position Professor Heston holds among the people of Seattle, we clip the following resolutions from one of their daily papers :

WHEREAS, In the departure of Prof. John W. Heston, the cause of education in this city is deprived of an earnest worker, the high school of an efficient leader, and the teachers therein of a warm friend; and,

WHEREAS, We, the teachers of the high school, fully appreciate the fact that its present prosperous condition is largely due to his efficient management; that his earnest co-operation has made our individual labors more effective, and that his careful example, encouraging words, earnest advice and high ideas have had an effect on the character of his pupils which can never be overestimated; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we hereby assure him of our deep interest in his future welfare, and formerly express the regard which we entertain for him; and while we sincerely regret his departure we rejoice in the fact that he will have even a wider field in which to sow the lessons of truth and right, which ever go to form true manhood and womanhood: be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to Prof. Heston, and that they also be published in the daily papers.

SERENADE

In the gentle light of the silver moon
He sang a serenade,
On the listening ear of the fleeting night,
To his heart's own chosen maid.

And e'en as the last notes die away,
Up goes the window pane,
And the other fellow politely asks,
If he won't oblige again.
