

... iron, brass, steel, and other metals, granite, diasp, diabase, and heretics. They will never fail. Let these inexhaustible stores be studied and developed and then with the advantage of experience won and to be gained, and with established plants, Pennsylvania will forever retain a proud supremacy in the utilization of natural resources.

One more word—: the articles of this exhibit have been so prepared that they may be taken from Chicago and set up again as the nucleus of an excellent State Industrial Museum. They will, if thus used, be of permanent value to the State. Among all possible locations for such a museum, here, in the geographical center of the State, and in connection with the industrial school which belongs to the State, is the only appropriate one, and here is where this Industrial Museum will be placed, or we are careless of possibilities.
