

"Professor, why is Pallas Athene considered the goddess of wisdom?"

"She was the only goddess who did not marry."

Suppose you did leave the shovel in the bin last spring and the coal man has dumped seven tons of coal on top of it, what good does it do a woman to keep reminding you of the fact.

A Sophomore bold and careless and gay,
One afternoon of a winter day,
Fixed himself up and went to a play.
It was Richard III. and a matinee.

The Sophomore sat in the front parquet,
All was serene as a day in May,
Until King Richard began to pray,
"A horse! a horse!" in a faithful way.

When the Sophomore sprang from his seat they say,
And cried, the poor king's fears to allay,
"I'll get you a horse without delay,
I know how it is—I have felt that way." —Wabash'

A religiously inclined student was found poring over a Bible one day and industriously making notes. After several hours he laid down the book with a sigh of relief. "Well, have you found much consolation!" asked his chum. "Yes, much," he responded. "You know I failed to pass last term. Well, look here," and he shoved the paper across the table. It contained the following: "Thou shalt not pass—Numbers 20:18. Suffer not a man to pass—Judges 3:28. The wicked shall no more pass—Nahum 1:15. Neither doth any son of man pass—Jeremiah 1:43. Beware that thou pass not—2 Kings 6:9. None shall pass—Isaiah 34.10."

Only a bit of golden hair,—
How came it there?
Was my heart all in a flutter?
No—for it was in the butter.
