

State's backs fumbled Brooke's long punts many times and when the ball was caught no one was back far enough to receive a pass, so that the ball had to be put in play on the spot where it had been caught. This was our only weak point, our other playing being easily on a par with that of Penn.'s. Our team was much lighter in weight than that of Penn.'s, but it was apparent to all spectators that it was equally as strong. Penn. failed many times in attempting to rush our line. With one or two exceptions our team always hit Penn.'s line for a gain. Little mention was made of Brown and McCaskey in the Philadelphia papers. McCaskey's tackling was sure and full of argument, and in the opinion of many spectators was the finest on the field. Brown was a sure ground gainer for State. His tackling was sure and hard. Every member of State's team played in their best form, and if the two teams had possessed more evenly matched kickers, the winner could not have been picked.
