Time of game—20 and 15 min. halves. Referee, Leete. Umpire, Dowler. Linesmen, Taylor and Dale. Touchdowns—Cartwright; Curtin, 3; Clinton; Mechesney, 2. Goals kicked, Cartwright; Mechesney.

EXCHANGES.

What with class odes, histories, prophecies, ivy poems, commencement addresses and local news, fiction seems to have been crowded out of the majority of the June exchanges. However, among the few that did find space for it we found some very excellent articles. The verse, too, seemed to have some of the gayety and sprightliness of the season, giving an enlivening touch to pages that otherwise would have appeared dull and uninteresting. Then, also, there are half-tones, artotypes and other types galore, all of which, though in some cases rather excessive, gave a better appearance to the journals. All in all, the commencement issues were a decided success.

Among the foremost of those which claim our attention on account of merit, to say nothing of appearance, is the Bowdoin Quill. In the whole number there is not a single dry page, while its verse clippings are only of the very best. "Ye postman" is ever eagerly awaited.

The Muhlenberg, following the example of this season of metamorphosis, has changed her dress. And, to our eyes, the change is for the better.
