

WHATEVER faults the library may have it certainly has one good feature, and that is every student has free and easy access to all books, for he is privileged to act as his own librarian, his self-respect being relied upon to properly replace them. Such a system is a great advantage as it means a saving of considerable time. Lately this privilege has been abused by some one abstracting books. Such conduct is extremely selfish and shows that a true love for books is lacking. It may be excused under the pretense of "getting even" for conditions, but, as a matter of fact, the only persons suffering are the student and his fellows, as all losses are covered by drawing upon the damage fund. It is to be hoped that such losses will cease, if not out of respect to self and to the college, at least from love to his fellow.
