

sistance lent me by friend George. But, Jack, its time to start on these pictures if we wish to finish by tea-time;" and with that the light went out.

As I replaced the negative, by the dim rays from the ruby lantern, I thought of the possibilities of such an accident and inwardly resolved to be very careful about taking pictures of bell-buoys or, for that matter, of anything involving similar conditions.

A. H. MILLER, '02.

