

All these things will aid you to be the type of men which State especially needs for her growth. Form the acquaintance of every man likely to go to college in your community, and make an honest effort to have him know the many advantages held forth at our college. Find out the names of the graduates of your High Schools and Academies one year in advance of graduation, and have catalogues sent to probable college students. If local or city papers attack the College in any way, refute their statements when advisable, but be careful of your statements and composition that you may hit hard and sure. Whenever and wherever you meet a man, who is an ex-student of State, rap him on the back and tell him you know him. He won't strike back, but will be your friend, and State's kinship will grow.

"No man has a right, moral or otherwise, to attend a college, receiving the benefits it offers, and do nothing in return for his Alma Mater. A man who will go back on his college lacks the true ring, and is made of a material similar to traitors in national affairs. He is a man likely not to honor his father and his mother. Uphold State wherever you go, and you will find the students crowding the College's capacity.

"Yours always for State and the fellows of State."

WE make one more appeal to the Alumni in behalf of the athletics of the college. The Advisory Committee of the Alumni Association made a proposition to the students that if they (the students) would pay up the debts of the Athletic Association, which was something over $300.00, that the Alumni Association would try to keep it out to debt. Acting upon this the students gave the balance of their damage deposits to the Association, and the required amount was assured. It now remains for the Alumni to fulfill their part. To do this they have circulated the following paper:

"We the undersigned agree to pay twenty-five dollars ($25) each toward an Alumni Athletic Endowment Fund of The Pennsylvania State College. The income of the Fund to be used for the encouragement and support of the Student Athletics and to be expended as may be directed by a Committee of the Alumni
