

It is found that this way of handling this bye-product of butter making is more profitable than any other.

Forty-nine applications for enrollment in the Dairy School of 1900 are now on file. The members of the School will be selected according to the experience which they have had in creamery work and on the dairy farm, and will be notified of their enrollment early in December.

The Station has just completed the filling of a new round silo of a nominal capacity of 100 tons. The silo was constructed after the plans published by the Cornell Station, and cost about $165.

