

last practice game just before leaving for Princeton. Cure, upon whom so much of our confidence rested, sustained a most serious injury to his knee, and even after receiving treatment at the Philadelphia hospital, was unable to go in the game. The loss of such material behind the line was only the more sincerely felt because our line was weakened by the absence of F. F. Miller, whose ankle was too weak to permit him to play.

Handicapped in this manner, the men lined up against the best material Princeton could produce. The reports sent out as to Princeton's weakness were evidently false, for when the time came, her most trusted men were all ready to go in the game, and were nerved to play as never before. The defeat we received at their hands should cause no dismay, for they were determined to wreak vengeance upon the team which was in no condition to meet them.

State won the toss and chose the north goal, being slightly favored by a breeze which was springing up. After some preliminary work Princeton secured the ball, and by a series of rushes directed at the tackles and center, forced the ball across for a touchdown after four and one-half minutes of play. The goal was kicked by Mills. The playing during the rest of this half resulted in no more scoring. In the second half Princeton added six more to her score and as nothing further was accomplished, the game ended with score 12-0 in her favor.

State's fumbling has been harshly criticized by some, but much of the poor passing was due to the interference at the center, where Booth, the veteran player, used all kinds of illegitimate tricks upon Cummings. Everything being taken into account, such a defeat is nothing to feel sorry for. The playing of Captain Randolph, Burns and Maxwell deserves special mention. Following is the line-up:

PRINCETON	POSITIONS.	STATE
Mills	left guard	Randolph
Booth	center	Cummings
Edwards	right guard.	Scholl
Hillebrand	right tackle	T. H. Miller
