

The Editor's Desk.

It seems to be customary for the Editor, in the editorials, to say something upon some subject, without much thought as to whether said subject is either interesting or instructive. Sometimes, when contributions are scarce, this is necessary to give the magazine sufficient s'ze. However, we hope to be able to find enough material for a good magazine without resort to editorials. Unless there is really something to be said, we believe "silence is golden."

In this connection it might be well to remind the student body that the LANCE is the student's organ. It should voice the opinions not only of the editors, but of the whole student body and also of the alumni. We would say too that the LANCE is Free in fact as well as in name and may be called upon by anyone in the cause of right. If you have a just cause for grievance, its pages are open.

The first thing the present management hopes to do is to increase the popularity and respect of the LANCE among the students. Ask a State man about our athletics and he waxes enthusiastic; but ask him about the College Magazine and he looks a little ashamed and replies, "Yes, we have one, but it always comes out a month late, and all the news is stale." It is our ambition to remove the cause for such complaint.
