

—“Songs of the Eastern Colleges:” Hinds and Noble, New York City. Price $1.25.

One of the characteristic expressions of student feeling and opinion is through the medium of song, be it in America or Europe. Every college has its representative songs, which not only serve to heighten the undergraduate spirit, but they are the means of reviving those memories that will forever unite the alumnus with his alma mater. In the above volume we have gathered together all the typical and popular songs of the eastern colleges. The purpose of the book is twofold: first, to provide the student of these colleges with songs that are sung at any of their familiar gatherings; second, to deepen the spirit of brotherhood among college associations as they become acquainted with each other's songs. The book should be in the hands of every man connected with the college world.

—The manager of “The Times” desires to state to the commendation of ex-Manager Norris and Manager Johnston of THE FREE LANCE, that they have handled the business of their magazine better than any managers who have had the LANCE printed by “The Times.” At the time of this writing there is not a cent owing to “The Times” for work which these managers have contracted for, but it must still be recalled with regret that there is a considerable amount yet due from the administration of former managers. The success of the present administration may be directly attributed to the wise oversight of Mr. J. E. Wagner, the retiring editor-in-chief.
