Carnegie, Schwab, White and a new era at State College. One disadvantage of an institution supported by the State is that private individuals do not feel called upon to endow it; then the State often fails to provide adequate means of support, and the institution is able to do but little of the work which lies before it. Such has been the case with State College in the past. On every hand the lack of money and facilities for carrying on the work has been apparent, and many projects for the good of the college have been abandoned because of this lack. Now, however, better things are in store for our college. We are to have a new library building from Mr. Carnegie, a new chapel from Mr. and Mrs. Schwab, and aid for graduates and undergraduates from Mr. Gilbert White, State, '82. The two gifts first mentioned will provide for two very pressing needs, while the last will prove a perpetual incentive to earnest, honest, manly scholarship. These are the direct benefits; but the benefits of these gifts to the college are still greater, in that they will call the attention of other men of means and other graduates to the needs of the college; and we hope to see the day when State College shall be richly endowed, as she truly deserves to be.

Great credit is due Dr. Atherton for his share in this beginning of a new era for State College.

Why are events at State not published by the daily papers? This is a question that has been asked more than once this year, and is yet unanswered. Surely there is something of public interest here.

Athletics furnish the chief part of college news, and that at least should be reported. Our athletics are of no mean order, but an instance of the credit we get is the report of the Annapolis game. State beats the "middies" and gets a very small part of a column of print, but many lesser games are fully reported. The
