

halls and duties the songs we sang here with our classmates will come back to us with redoubled force and sweetness, and will glisten in memory like splendid jewels in rich settings. Let us make the days to come a time long to be remembered along this line.

Speaking of singing reminds us that there is one song we know thoroughly. It is a rather difficult tune in E Minor, with several accidentals, and the chorus ends with these words—"We need money." The January issue was delayed eleven days because the Business Manager lacked the money to pay for the December issue. We need every dollar that is due, and we need it now. All efforts of the editors count but little unless the money is on hand on time. We are not sure that you like the music or words. We are not especially fond of it ourselves. But you see we are necessarily somewhat closely attached to it. We will refrain if you will cease from refraining.
