

Williamsport to hold their annual banquet. They arrived at Bellefonte, where a special on the Central Railroad awaited them to convey them to their destination.

Immediately after the arrival at Williamsport the class marched in a body up Pine Street to the Updegraff, where the banquet was to be held. During the march the college and class yells were given frequently, intermingled with popular songs.

After registering, the fellows proceeded about the town and called on friends. While they were thus engaged, word was received from the college that a large number of the Sophomores had started for Williamsport for the purpose of breaking up the banquet. Immediately the fellows were notified and soon gathered at the hotel where they prepared to receive the Sophomores.

At ten o'clock, the hour set for the banquet, no Sophomores were in sight and the Freshmen, to the number of ninety-eight, repaired to the banquet hall. Shortly after the banquet began, the Sophomores arrived, and finding they could in no way gain an entrance to the banquet hall, they contented themselves by sending in a delegate who congratulated the class on its success.

In the midst of the enjoyment, the famous ex-State man, H. R. Scholl, '01, appeared and was warmly welcomed by the banqueters. After spending some time with them, he made a short address which was warmly applauded.

The time passed quickly and pleasantly and at the close of the banquet the toastmaster, Dan. D. Dodge, announced the toasts which were delivered by the following speakers:

Henry C. McIlveen, Howard M. Sankey, Miles Killmer, Edgar G. Yeckley, Don. G. Mahaffey and Wm. H. Dean.

After the close of the banquet the fellows dispersed, some to sleep and others to "ramble round the town" until time for their departure on the 7:10 train. When the banqueters finally arrived at the college they were hilariously received by their classmates who had remained at home, and who can not say, "It was worth five years of my life to say that I was there."
