

Besides—and it is in this that they are infinitely superior to men—whereas many men see their love cooled by possession, women see theirs increased and sealed by it.

The moment a woman is married to the man she loves she belongs to him, body, heart and soul. Her love is the occupation of her life, her only thought, and, I may add without the slightest idea of irreverence, her religion.

She loves that man as she does God. If all men could only be sufficiently impressed with this fact, how kind and devoted they would be!

EDITORIALS.

It may not be generally known that the editorial columns are open to any one who has an opinion about College matters that he would like to have expressed. All that is necessary is that the articles be signed. A free use of this chance would be of advantage to all concerned.

There is one view of “sponging” of which we have never heard any one speak. It is the injustice to the one who is honest in all his work, both classroom and examination.

At the present time there are cash prizes amounting to over $800 for which men may compete during their course, and the deciding point is almost entirely a question of high grades.

Again, the Faculty is at present making a limited trial of exemption from examinations if students attain a certain per cent. in their classroom work.

Finally, membership in the honorary fraternity Phi Kappa Phi is almost entirely a question of high grades.

In view of what depends on one's class standing, it seems to us that, in the first place, no one should be so lost to a sense of honor as to put a classmate at a disadvantage in order to save himself. And on the other hand, it seems strange that any man
