

JUNIOR BANQUET.

The Junior Banquet held in the Park Hotel at Williamsport, on Friday evening, November 13th, the eve of the game with Dickinson, was an unqualified success. For first class hotel arrangements, toasts and general good time, this banquet of the Junior year was the most successful of the three which the class of 1905 has had the good fortune to hold. The Seniors held their banquet across the hall in an adjoining room, and the utmost good fellowship and feeling prevailed.

After storing away all the good things which the host had provided for the hungry seventy-seven, toastmaster, William B. Hoke, opened the after-dinner speeches with a few well chosen remarks, referring to our good fortune in the past, present and future. He introduced Benjamin U. Hamilton as the speaker in the first toast of "Laps." Mr. Hamilton compared the career of the class of 1905 to that of a race horse, and each of the four years of our college course as one of the "laps." He referred in glowing terms to the past history of 1905, and predicted great things for the future. Mr. Hollinger was the next speaker on the toast "Robins." According to Mr. Hollinger the "robins" are the little birds who send the "blue letters," etc., for which the boys chase down to the post office every morning. He told several apt stories of the various kinds of "robins" which influence a college man's life.

The next speaker was Mr. Reuben H. Aungst on the toast, "Our Alma Mater, Its Past, Present and Future." He traced the history of the college from its beginning to the present day, and showed the influence the class of 1905 has had in making its present history. He painted the future in glowing terms, and if we are to believe his words, there is a large and glorious niche awaiting each member in the Hall of Fame of the future.

The concluding toast, "The Men We've Lost," was delivered by Mr. Ira C. Minick. He enumerated a few of our "emigrants," who had done the class great service, among them Smith, Russell, Stout, Bennett, and delivered a glowing tribute to their memory.
