

puts up. So you see it won't be the boys' fault if we don't have a good team. The schedule this year is about the hardest we have ever been up against, and it is up to us to uphold our former good base ball record."

For a few minutes the fellows puffed away and no one spoke. All was still until with a crash Chad burst into the room, and with a flying leap dove upon the bed.

"Hurrah! Got my Dutch off," he cried, and with that he flew off into a fit of laughter.

"Speaking about flunks," said Hadley, "I hear they are going to get up an anti-flunk society to which only flunks are eligible. When a student receives his first summons to contribute to the library it is the same as his invitation to join the society. Such an organization would have been rather exclusive here about ten years ago. It would not have had a very large membership. Now, I suppose, it will be a matter of popular affair. The members will be assessed inversely proportional to the number of dollars they pay into the library. Meetings will be held once a week, and speeches will be made. Papers, such as "How I Passed Applied Mechanics" and "My Experiences in Freshmen Chemistry," will be read. Lectures will be given on such subjects as "Anti-Flunk Diet" and "How to Keep Above Grade With Grinding." These meetings will be very instructive to those who attend. It is to be hoped that the number of flunks will decrease thereby."

"I suppose you will be one of the charter members," said Jasper, who likes to knock occasionally.
