

Jacob A. Riis.

Before a large audience in the Auditorium last Thursday evening, Jacob A. Riis, the widely known social reformer, gave a lecture on "The Battle with the Slums." Lantern slides were used to illustrate the address. Owing to Mr. Riis' Danish accent, which somewhat hindered his articulation, those in the rear of the hall found it difficult to hear. Otherwise the lecture was very interesting and highly instructive.

A Correction.

Owing to a mistake in proof reading last week the names of King and Slader were omitted from the list of candidates for Assistant General Athletic Manager. The complete list should read:

A. M. Gardner, '06
O. F. Noss, '07
M. B. King, '07
W. A. Slader, '07

Under Class Regulations.

After the mass meeting last Thursday evening the two upper classes held a meeting to discuss the new regulations governing all under class contests. The rules were read over and several alterations and changes were made regarding revision. The regulations were referred back to the committee.

Co-operative Association.

Manager Leitzell, of the Pennsylvania State College Co-operative Association, has sent out copies of the constitution of the above organization to all the students. Nothing now remains for them to do except to subscribe their fee of one dollar and become members.

Great men satisfy our expectation, and each falls into his own place. They render life effective and magnetic, make for themselves room, food and associates, while their legitimate ideas are welcomed by those who have not the elements of greatness.—E. E. S., in the Forum.
