The Carnegie Gift.

Perhaps the most gratifying news for the College world last week was the donation by Mr. Andrew Carnegie of $10,000,000 in U. S. Steel Bonds for the purpose of providing annuities for aged college professors. The bonds, which will produce a revenue of $500,000 yearly, will be transferred to a board of directors, composed chiefly of college presidents, who shall have complete charge of the distribution of this money. This board shall be maintained by elections, all the colleges receiving the benefit of the gift being entitled to a vote at these elections. Only the strictest of sectarian schools and such State institution as wish to maintain their relations exclusively with the state government, shall be excluded by the conditions of the donation. This is one of the worthiest gifts of that great Pennsylvania philanthropist and it has received a flood of favorable comments among education.

At the University of Nebraska a squad of fifteen is kept in mental and physical training for two months, preliminary to selecting two teams of three each for inter-collegiate debating contests.—Ex.
