

Base Ball.

battle last eleven innings, as he got two hits and a run off "Mac," and did some great throwing from right field. Umpire Sutherland was about the "worst ever," and here's how the dispute came about at the close of the game:—

With the big crowd on its feet howling deliriously in the last half of the eleventh, the score was 3 to 2 in State's favor, with two out, and E. Mason and Bayliss on third and second bases respectively for West Virginia. McIlveen turned suddenly and threw to second base to catch Bayliss napping, and Mason made a dash for home. Cree shot the ball to Catcher Killmer, who stood several feet from the plate awaiting the runner. It was the plainest and easiest "out" imaginable, and Mason turned away, and walked to the bench. State's players ran in from the field and the crowd began to move away, when Umpire Sutherland hesitated a moment, then ran off the diamond and called out "safe" in a loud tone. State's players paid no attention whatever to the umpire but quietly left the field, as there was no possible doubt concerning the decision. Not a single spectator or player present had the least idea of the player being safe at the plate; and it is very difficult indeed to understand Sutherland's motive in rendering such an outrageous decision. The umpire's only excuse was that Killmer had not touched the runner with the ball, but that was simply ridiculous to any person who witnessed the play. Some of the West Virginia players even urged Umpire Sutherland to change his decision as they said they were not accustomed to win games in such a way, but this wonderful official simply shook his head, and departed.

The game had been a beautiful battle from the start, and it was extremely unfortunate that Umpire Sutherland's decision caused such an unpleasant ending. As a general rule the decisions of the umpire are "law," but to abide by such a piece of robbery as this, would be a lasting disgrace to West Virginia and her students. Our athletic relations with this college have always been agreeable and sportsman-like, and we hope that Umpire Sutherland will retire from his laurels and dabble no more in college athletics.

Diamond Flashes.

California Normal plays a return game here on Beaver Field next Saturday, and our Varsity nine is due to play a little baseball.

Next Tuesday (Decoration Day) the Princeton Tigers will be met, and this should prove a magnificent battle between "Southpaws," McIlveen and Bryan.

It is very often "the easy things" which turn out to be "loaded." This is sad but true! Moral:—We are learning something every day.
