Toothpicks vs. Tumblers.

By far the most interesting football game yet played on Beaver Field was that of last Saturday when an aggregation of tall lean upper classmen met a similar team of short stubby students.

The varieties of uniforms exhibited were limited only by the number of players in the game, and some were freakish in the extreme bringing forth shouts of laughter from on-lookers along the sidelines. The game opened with Brewster's kick-off for the Toothpicks, and then followed such an exhibition of the fine points of football as has seldom been seen on any college gridiron.

The Tumblers had the ball and tried line-plunging but the Toothpicks lay down in the way and stopped the plays. Then "Nell" Rafter signalled, "Thermo-dynamics, Alternators, Ikey Reber," and Gilson tore around right end for a good gain only to have the ball brought back by the referee. The Tumblers were penalized for combined holding, offside play, and slugging a distance of forty yards and the ball was given to the Toothpicks. Their strength lay in end runs, and these were used extensively. Lorah finally seized the ball on a fumble and crossed the line for a touchdown, but the referee saw something peculiar in the play and penalized the Toothpicks forty yards for luck, not allowing the score. Occasionally some player would be "laid out," in which case he was promptly lifted to the official wheelbarrow and trundled off the field. Mahaffey was the worst offender in this aspect. The first half finally ended with no score.

In the second half the antics of the first half were repeated, but both sides settled down to "play the game," with the result that Mahaffey finally got away on an end run for a touchdown and the Tumblers had won 6-0. After the game, with much ceremony the Toothpicks were each awarded a short thick "T" while the Tumblers were presented with a long thin "T." The proceeds of the game minus the printing expenses were about $25.00 which goes to the State Collegiam.
