

A Mean Practice.

To the Collegian :

There are at present some men in college who take pleasure in such contemptible acts as tampering with notices that are placed upon the bulletin boards. Among recent notices on the boards was one notifying a certain body of students of an important meeting. The number of the room where this meeting was to be held was changed by some mean scalawag unfit to be in our midst. On account of this low trick the new men at college who were principally concerned in this meeting did not get there.

We would be grateful to anyone who reports such a scamp to us that we may use him as an example to have this mean practice stopped.
