

Lincoln Day.

also stated that Dr. Brumbaugh, as much as any man living, could appreciate what Lincoln's life was worth to educational advancement.

Dr. Brumbaugh then took the platform, and for forty minutes held the close attention of his audience as he brought before his hearers the power and splendor of Lincoln's achievements in the face of almost every obstacle that could bar a man's way.

He spoke of Lincoln's modesty, and of his capacity for hard work. He believes that the rise of so great a man was not an accident but the outcome of years of toil and tireless perseverance. Then suddenly digressing, and addressing the students directly he exclaimed, "Oh, I wish I could get into your minds the fact that there is no genius for you except the genius of hard work." He brought to remembrance Lincoln's fight for an education, and his ultimate command of language that made some of his speeches and letters imperishable.

In short Dr. Brumbaugh presented Lincoln as a type of man to be used as a model for young men of to-day, noble, kind, modest, unwavering in character, energetic and tireless in his work, and of irreproachable private life.

Dr. Brumbaugh sat down amidst a shower of applause.

After a selection by the Glee Club, "Home That I Love," Parker McF. Jordan, '06, spoke on "Lincoln the President" which was well received. "Lincoln at Home" was the subject of a masterly oration by O. C. Hays, '06, who fairly outdid himself and completely captivated the audience.

The exercises were closed by the singing of the national hymn, "My Country 'tis of Thee."

The remainder of the day was spent by students in all the numerous ways of enjoyment common to holiday time, and was, altogether, a day to be remembered pleasantly in after years.
