EDITORIAL.

We have in college a number of organizations composed of men from certain counties after which the clubs are named. After making an exhaustive search for the object of these clubs we find that in nearly every case the sole purpose is to have a picture put into the La Vie. Following suggestions given by several alumni members of the faculty we decided to outline work which these clubs, by the nature of their organization, would be able to do. To begin with, we would like to have a thousand students at this college next year. The most effective advertising possible is that done by the students themselves. All that is necessary for the students to do is to inquire at their prep schools and convince prospective college students of the advantages of State. We think that through the agency of these county clubs this kind of advertising can be systemized and organized into a campaign. Another method used by some, for example the York Club, is to have annual banquets, usually at Christmas time, at which prospective State men are invited to meet students and graduates and receive their first lesson in State spirit. Let us get busy, fellows.

Kicklets.

There are nine shower baths in the armory but the size of the supply pipe is such that no more than three baths can be used at the same time. Query: What is the value of the other six baths?

"Silence is a golden rule for a library" is the notice that confronts us as we enter Carnegie library. Why should not such a statement stand just as well for the engineering library? The latter often reminds one of a meeting place for a "Women's Rights" organization.

A directory containing the names and room numbers of the students in the dormitories would be a great convenience. We think it would be very little trouble to compile such a one and place it in the vicinity of the main bulletin board.
