Band Concert.

After a great deal of trouble, Instructor Godard has at last secured the privilege to give a band concert next Saturday evening in the Auditorium. "Paddy," as well as every member of the band, is doing his best to make this concert a great success, and those fellows who have ever dropped into the Old Chapel during band practice know that they are going to hear something out of the ordinary next Saturday.

Last spring the band gave a concert on the campus and every fellow who heard it declared it to be first class. It's going to be just as good and much better this year, and every body will get his money's worth.

The band has been with the student body on every possible occasion, playing at all the important foot ball and base ball games on Beaver Field. This shows what State spirit is, and now they are asking the fellows to simply go to the Auditorium next Saturday night, drop a quarter in the slot, and hear the best band concert ever given at State. This money will be used in buying the latest and best music on the market, to be played at the coming base ball games and track-meets. If this concert is well attended the band will be able to play music this spring that will be appreciated by every body. Now, fellows, show your spirit.

The following program will be carried out.

The Wendling Lecture.

There was a comparatively small audience in the Auditorium on Friday evening, but those who were there felt repaid for having come, for the lecture of the evening was one of the best of the Y.M.C.A. course. Hon. George R. Wendling gave his lecture "Saul of Tarsus," and as regards matter, form, and delivery, it was magnificent. It showed a great amount of study of the New Testament, particularly of that part with which St. Paul's life and writings have to do. Mr. Wendling is a speaker of great force and eloquence, and his mastery of the subject was apparent from beginning to end.

His command of language, the beauty of his rhetoric, and the perfection of his diction, combined with clear pronunciation and a forceful delivery, made the lecture interesting to the very end.

As an orator Mr. Wendling stands among the foremost of Americans. He has several lectures but his most famous ones are, "The Man of Galilee," and "Saul of Tarsus."

Class Sleighrides.

The Juniors took advantage of the unusually large fall of snow on Tuesday of last week and went to Bellefonte on their annual sleigh ride. Many of the fellows attended the dance held for the occasion. The sleds left the college at about half-past four and returned at one.

On Friday the Sophomores went to Bellefonte in five sleds. The main attraction that evening was the play—"Under Southern Skies," in the Opera House.

For the first time in four years the Freshmen received a sleigh ride, which occurred on Saturday. A dance served to keep the fellows occupied during the evening.

Basket Ball.

The Sophomore-Freshman basket ball game in the Armory last Friday night proved even more exciting than had been expected, and "the Fresh" sprung the biggest sort of a surprise by winning out in decisive style. Notwithstanding the fierce class rivalry the contest was a real basket ball game all the way and both teams played a strong, heady, passing game. Referee Hollinger's impartial rulings checked "rough-house" playing almost entirely, although naturally every man on both teams was into the fray clear up to his neck, and the play was fast and fierce from the start.

As the opening whistle blew every player was into the fracas like a streak and a "foul" was called in favor of '09. Captain Ross then scored the first point for "the Fresh" and Rome howled for many minutes. Throughout the first half the score wavered considerably but the Fresh always managed to hold the lead by a point or so, or at least keep the score at a tie, until the final tally stood 13 to 11 at the close of the half, and the Freshman warriors were hustled off the floor by their howling admirers.

For the second period both fives came on the floor prepared for the worst, and the play waxed fast and furious, three lighting field goals by Captain Moorhead of the Sophs at one stage putting 1908 to the front. But meanwhile "Sally" for the Freshman team was "shooting 'em in" in splendid style, while Ross also made several sensational shots. Then '09 gradually got to working more smoothly together towards the close of the game, and wound up a most
