

A Record-Breaking Contest.

learned right well what worthy foremen are the warriors of the "White and Blue."

Although in the matter of strikeouts Deshon had the better of McIlveen, yet it cannot be said that Cornell's star box man was in any measure the more effective, since McIlveen had Cornell's batters so securely under his thumb that nearly all their efforts resulted in popflies or easy infield grounders, while the sum total of hits on both sides was six. State had eleven men left on bases to only six for Cornell, and numerous times did State have men on bases with a sure score in sight, only to be thwarted by fast fielding or superb pitching. The "squeeze play" failed no less than three times, any one of which meant victory;—showing how desperately State strove for the winning tally. At Cornell it is the sentiment that this game is the finest ever witnessed on Percy Field, and although it was not State's fortune to triumph, there is some satisfaction in losing a battle to such courteous, sportsman like rivals as the Cornellians have proved themselves.
