Alton Packard.

We hesitate in giving indiscriminate praise to the entertainments in the Y. M. C. A. course this year, but the illustrated talk by Alton Packard in the Auditorium on Saturday evening surely deserves a word of appreciation. Mr. Packard was here two years ago, and practically all of those who heard him at that time were glad of the opportunity to listen to him again. Consequently, when he stepped upon the platform the Auditorium was comfortably filled with a larger audience than has been seen at any Y. M. C. A. entertainment this year. The talk, the subject of which was "Vanity Fair," described amusingly many of the weaknesses of mankind. The most interesting feature, however, was the large number of crayon drawings that the speaker made as he talked, giving no intimation of what the cartoons would be until the very last stroke brought out the idea intended by the artist. There were several excellent pictures of scenery as well as cartoons, and they proved to be very interesting and well executed. If Mr. Packard comes back next year he may be sure of a large audience.

Notice.

The 1907 edition of the La Vie is about exhausted. All students or others, who desire to secure a copy of the College Annual should procure one at once. There are less than two score of these books on hand and after these few are disposed of it will be impossible to secure a copy of this valuable book. Seniors who have not secured their second copy or who wish additional copies, are requested to obtain them at the earliest opportunity. La Vies at 402 McAllister Hall.

Thespians.

The Thespian Dramatic Society will soon issue a call for candidates from the upper-classes for parts in the new play which it is intended to give this season. This new production is to be a burlesque on one of Shakespeare's most famous plays, and is somewhat of a departure from the plays usually given by this society. A number of the members of the club are in College and with the addition of a number of other men who will try for positions, we feel sure that the production this year will be up to the standard. The play last year was very good, but the selection for this year will be more suited to the tastes of a college audience, and will undoubtedly made a "big hit."
