EDITORIAL.

Today and tomorrow on Beaver Field our team will engage in what will probable prove to be the hardest fought games played thus far this season. Villanova has practically the same team that she has had during the past three years, the majority of her players being Seniors. The team has played eleven games this season, ten of which have been victories for Villanova. The game with the Lancaster Tri-State team has been the only one lost. The game with the University of Pennsylvania was won by Villanova.

While we do not feel that her successful record will be continued today and tomorrow, we do believe strongly that our team needs the support of every man on the sidelines. No man should allow even the possibility of our team's defeat by his failure to cheer it on to victory. Only the man who has played the game can tell just what good "rooting" is worth.

Fortunately, our schedule is not open to the criticism that we have no good games at home. In many colleges, especially where the system of paid admission is still in force, the students complain that all of the best games are played away from home. We surely have no reason to complain in this respect when strong teams such as Villanova, Dickinson, West Virginia, W. U. P., and the Indians play on Beaver Field

Since our duty is plain, by all means let every man of us turn out to these games and, for that matter, to every other game played at home. Let the cheer leaders show that they deserve the title, and if State does not have two more victories to her credit tomorrow evening, it cannot be said that it was because of a lack of proper support of the team.

Indications seem favorable for the beginning of rifle practice early next year. There is no obvious reason why an art that is so essential in military training should not be taken up in connection with our military department. It seems that the only thing lacking is means to pay for the installation of the necessary equipment, a need which will no doubt be provided for in the military appropriation. With good scores would come a rifle team, which might in time be admitted to the National Rifle Association.

A communication from Professor Jackson in regard to a certain remark attributed to him, which appeared in a recent issue, arrived too late for publication. It seems that the remark had an entirely different meaning from the one which seemed apparent, and the Collegian will gladly publish his explanation as soon as possible.
