Editor of the Collegian:—

Almost everyone who witnessed the wrestling match last Friday night was impressed by the lack of activity shown on the part of some of the wrestlers. This may have been due to the science of the profession but it failed to impress the audience as such. In our estimation it is not a test of strength for one man to get down on the mat and allow another to work for half an hour trying to turn him over. It is too much like a one-ringed circus in a big city—there must be more doing. As a remedy to this we would suggest that a time limit be set and if at the expiration of this time neither man has won the fall it shall be a draw. The final result could be reckoned as before but a man must work fast and hard to win. The contest would then be one of strength and skill and not simply one of endurance.
