The Cider Scrap.

Well, it looks as if we produced the goods this time, and against odds at that. With that moo, the freshmen should have cleaned us out, and won hands down, but our spirit did the trick.

To begin with, they lost time in throwing flour. We have seen flour before, so that did not make us feel bad. Then, after the close-in, they could not locate the barrel with any success.

Meanwhile, during the first few seconds, about eight of our men crawled up over the heads of the rest, and commenced dislodging the freshmen's first arrivals with much success. Our flanks worked around the barrel and into the ranks of the freshmen, taking off men on the way. The freshmen were stupefied, it seemed, by the sudden onslaughts, and before ten minutes had passed it was only a case of sticking to it and the scrap was ours. At the count the score stood 33-11; we had conquered overwhelming odds with our 1910 spirit.

The Cider Scrap

(Freshman Version)

The failure of the freshman class to win the cider scrap was due to several causes. In the first place the sophomores went toward the barrel as one man but the freshmen were widely scattered. Then the freshmen were new at the game and at the very start they failed to hoist their men on top of the barrel, while the sophomores gained possession of that vantage point in the first minute of the fray. During the first fifteen minutes the freshmen fought hard while their opponents saved their energy. Another thing which was detrimental to the freshmen was the lifting of light men on top of the barrel, who were easily thrown down. The sophomores seemed to succeed in edging their way over one half the space about the barrel, and at the same time holding their position on top, while the freshmen seemed to push toward one point only. The freshmen were defeated fairly and showed their spirit by giving the sophomore yell after the victory was announced.
