

WATCH OUR WINDOW

For our new cravats and soft shirts. Do not forget to order your dress suit in time for commencement. We make the kind with that swell shoulder. One can rent either a full dress or tuxedo for a very nominal sum.

THE TOGGERY SHOP

The Pharsonians.

The funny event of the college year will be the Minstrel Show to be given by the Pharsonians on Saturday evening. From all reports this show will be the best ever given here. The music is largely made up of original parodies on popular songs, and abounds in local hits, and the jokes are all "there with it." We are assured that there will be no offensive personalities in the entire performance. There are to be three specialties of a very funny character, and the committee claims to have a startling original scene for the last number of the program, the exact nature of which they are keeping mysteriously dark. It will be a reproduction of a chicken-feed, but just how this difficult feat is to be carried off will not be known until the curtain rises for that scene. The minstrels are having the most careful coaching by Mr. Charles Couch, of Pittsburg, who proved so successful with the Glee Club last fall. The management asks us to state that the doors will be closed after the curtain rises, and that those who come late will have to wait in the lobby until the ushers open the door during one of the infrequent intervals between the songs and gags.

Y. M. C. A. Items.

Dr. Edward A. Steiner, who gives the lecture "On the Trail of the Immigrant," on the evening of May 15, is a professor in the Iowa State College. He was born in Austria, received his early school training in Bohemia, attended the higher schools of Germany, took his doctor's degree at the University of Heidelberg, and spent his early manhood in Russia. He is probably the best informed man in this country on the subject of immigration on both sides of the Atlantic.

The subject for the Association meeting on next Sunday evening in Room 529 is "The Unique Student Summer Conferences."

To The Alumni.

In view of the unusual financial conditions which exist at present, men are being laid off at many places instead of being taken on, so that the Alumni who have vacancies occurring under them will confer an especial favor on the College by notifying the Secretary of the Alumni Association of such vacancies. Younger Alumni who perhaps may not be in a position to employ men, should notify us of any vacancies coming to their knowledge. In this way we may be able to aid most of the graduating class to obtain positions after Commencement.

Yours very truly,
Secretary Alumni Association

The College Minstrel Show on Saturday night at 8 sharp.
