EDITORIAL.

With the approach of the Cornell game comes more and more strongly the feeling that State must win. There is not a man on the varsity that when the critical moment comes cannot be depended upon to do his share towards a victory over the big red team. We want the team to feel that every loyal State man stands back of it, and that, win or lose, we know that they will do their best to uphold the honor of Penn State.

The loyal alumus who sent the letter regarding Beaver in Field seems to have misinterpreted the article in last week's Collegian on The New Athletic Field. It is certainly not thought to let the name Beaver Field pass out of the landmarks of Penn State. The question is whether the name shall be applied to the new field or left to designate the field to which it has been so long attached. The names East and West were not proposed for the new athletic field, but were proposed, in case it is decided to apply the name Beaver Field to the new athletic grounds, for the present field and for the play ground that is being prepared west of the Annex.

We agree with the writer of the letter that there is little significance to the names East and West. We also heartily endorse his plea that the life-long work of Dr. Atherton be commemorated in some fitting manner. Why not name one of the three fields Atherton Field ? If this is done, we will then have two monuments of a similar nature to the two men who have done the most for Penn State. The new field should by all means be called Beaver Field, and it is going to be hard for some time at least to get the old field called anything but that also. Why not name the field to the west of the Annex, Atherton Field; and let the matter stand at that until the time comes when a more significant name than East Field presents itself for what is now Beaver Field.

We are always glad to receive letters from those who are interested in affairs about college, and will publish such letters if tney treat of subjects which are of general interest to State men.

The Librarian has called our attention to the occasional practice of a few students in throwing ink from fountain pens upon the floor of the library. Piide in the entire cleanliness and neatness of this building is so general that we feel but to call the attention of the student body thereto, will be sufficient. The use of ink is forbidden by the Library committee in reading room, alcove and stack; and if fountain pens are not carefully used, they will of necessity be included. The Collegian and the stude.it body generally, insist that the library building shall be guarded as a trust from the generous donors, and ink spots on the floor are absolutely_inconsistent with such trust and pride. A word to the wise.

A Good Thing.

News comes from Dickinson that a Press Club has been formed there. The purpose of the club is to spread news concerning the college throughout the country, and to repress all news that it deems detrimental to the welfare of the college. The club is composed of nine men who represent the various phases and activities of college life and have ability along literary lines.

Such a club would be a fine thing for Penn State. It could endeavor to teach the people of the country that we are not the Bellefonte collegians, and it could also prevent the publication of some articles about Continued on page 7
