

ciation and the District Y. M. C. A. held meetings at the college and they will be followed by others. A large delegation from the State Grangers convention recently spent a day at the college. The Lutheran denomination is building a commodious church building in the village, while the Methodists and Presbyterians contemplate replacing their present structures with larger and more worthy edifices. The Episcopalians have purchased a lot on which to erect a parish house, and the Catholics, who have recently had a priest appointed to this parish, will no doubt soon erect a mission.

The New Athletic Field.

There is perhaps nothing being watched with so much interest by the students and alumni, as the new athletic field, which is almost completed. The fifteen thousand dollars which were appropriated by the state is well nigh spent and soon we shall have one of the greatest fields in the country.

The track, according to the best authority, will be the fastest in the country. It is a quarter mile oval with a two hundred and twenty yard straightaway. The bed consists of a four inch layer of heavy stone, four inches of two-and-a-half stone thoroughly rolled, two inches of three-quarter inch stone, all covered with six inches of engine sparks. The last mentioned material was kindly donated by the Pennsylvania Railroad and is the finest that can be obtained.

It is expected that a permanent swimming pool and bath house will be ready for use by Commencement. This building will be made of concrete and will contain eighteen bathrooms and five showers. The ground for an athletic cage may be broken about Commencement time.

The new field will consist of the varsity field proper, in which baseball, track, football and lacrosse will have special accommodations; and eight acres at the other end which will be devoted to the student body as a play ground.

Practical Experience for Foresters.

Arrangements have been completed whereby the Seniors in Forestry will spend the month of January, 1909, in a lumber camp in some one of the forest regions of the country. A thorough study will be made of every operation from the tree to the sawmill, with special attention paid to the cost of each operation and the relative merits of methods used in different regions.

R. H. Thompson and S. S. Sadler will spend the month in the camp of Alger, Smith and company, near Duluth, Minn.; C. W. Wagner will spend January in a camp of the E. P. Burton lumber company, near Charleston, South Carolina; and J. E. Ingram will go into a camp operated by J. E. Henry and Sons company near Lincoln, New Hampshire.
