

The 59th Street power station was visited, where eleven large Corliss engines each with an overload capacity of over 11,000 horse power furnish the power for many of the electric roads of the city.

Lack of space prevents mention of the other plants visited. The treatment accorded to the men on the trip was most pleasing, and they wish to express their thanks particularly to Professors Jackson, Diemer, and Kinsloe, whose untiring efforts did much to make the trip pleasant and profitable.
