of games here for many seasons past."

At Notre Dame there was more than a gentle surprise awaiting our generally victorious ball players. The peculiar infield and the darkness of the grounds in every particular and place may have had something to do with our unexpectedly overwhelming defeat, but every White and Blue player is frank in acknowledging that our nine was clearly and cleanly out played. Disaster is always imminent in the uncertain game of baseball and it descended on us with full force a little less than a week ago at South Bend, Indiana.

Then the White and Blue got busy. It was seen that a victory over Michigan would more than even up things. Notre Dame and Michigan are tied in their race for the college baseball honors in the Middle West and as Michigan is by far the bigger institution of the two, our triumph at Ann Arbor means all the more to us. Seldom does a season pass when we do not "take over" one or more of the big colleges of the country in baseball and the score, "Penn State 9, Michigan 7," will not be forgotten here in many a day. The game itself was a see-saw affair in which the White and Blue finished strongly. Skemp won his second victory for the week and kept up his wonderfully good pitching record. The scores of the trip:

Each team has three games yet to play. The race is between the juniors and freshmen now.

They say that Eberlein doesn't run them out when he hits for less than three bases. The big freshman is certainly a hitter.
