The plan for selling the tickets will be the same as last year. Subscription lists will be passed among the faculty and students and if one thousand subscribers can be secured the price will be one dollar for the course and twenty-five cents extra for reserved seats. If the subscription list does not reach you, drop a postal to 273 Main, stating how many tickets you wish.

In selecting our course we have insisted on having the best, confidently believing that our generous patrons of former years will back us in this venture..... B.

The Hunting Season Opens.

The opening of the hunting season last Friday was quite an important event to many of the students. A considerable number are rod and gun enthusiasts and successful ones too—more or less. Almost every day now one will see the sportsman with his gun and almost every day someone will be eating wild rabbit, pheasant, or turkey, too.

The game about State College is always good, and reports this year say that this is no exception. We are to have the best quail season in half a dozen years, rabbits are numerous, and pheasants are more plentiful than last year or the year before. The
